Good Evening City Council members and Mayor Adams,

I am writing because I have concerns pertaining to community participation during city council meetings. By prohibiting residents from calling in during the council meetings we are limiting community engagement. As a result, residents are required to send emails. Sometimes, these emails are then paraphrased and those watching council meetings are not aware of the entire message. If we allowed citizens the opportunity to phone in their concerns, we could have more resident participation. Currently, LA City council and the LA County Board of supervisors allow residents to participate via phone. Both are much larger than Monrovia and we should offer the same opportunity. I am wondering if by not allowing this we are in any violation of the Brown Act?
